2013 Construction

Compensation Survey

Dear Construction Professional,

Thank you for your participation in the 2013 Compensation Survey! As consultants who work exclusively in the construction industry, we know that unless you were in the sunbelt or in Industrial construction, 2013 was a disappointing year, with spending levels largely unchanged from those of 2012. However, 2014 looks to be a better year, with building activity expected to increase by 5.8 percent overall.

A recent survey by the AGC in August found that almost three-quarters of contractors reported problems filling at least some of their craft positions, and over half were having trouble filling professional positions. This issue will continue to get worst as the baby boomers continue to retire. According to a report from the Federal Government the daily average number of people turning 65 in 2014 will be 9,100 daily and by 2029 that daily average number of people turning 65 will have increased to 11,400 daily!!!

In addition to recruiting and developing talent, part of retaining your workforce requires an adequate compensation program. In our recent Talent Management Survey almost 70\% of the Employed Respondents said they will search for other opportunities once the economy rebounds. The top two reasons they would consider leaving their present employment include: Inadequate Compensation ( $87 \%$ ) and Poor Opportunities for Advancement (54\%).

Compensation and advancement within the organization appear to be the most important factors in retaining and/or attracting talent.

We hope you will find the following information beneficial. Constantly we are trying to find groundbreaking solutions for our clients, and we appreciate the time that you take to assist us in pursuing our goal of helping to build world class construction companies.

The following is a summary of findings from the survey. We had 389 companies and over 1,600 nonresidential construction executives respond. For a more detailed analysis of compensation in particular geographic areas or markets, please contact us:

Contractor Type

The Rundown

There was quite a robust response to this year's survey. A majority ( $62 \%$ ) of the respondents were employed by Commercial General Contractors, $15 \%$ indicated that they were employed by either Heavy Civil or Industrial Contractors. 18\% were employed by Specialty Contractors, and the remaining 5\% were employed by either Real Estate Developers or Suppliers.

Take Away

With such a diversified response to our survey, Nexus Solutions is able to prepare more detailed compensation reports.

Respondent Firm Size

The Rundown

In analyzing the results, we found a widespread sample with respect to firm size.

Specifically, we found that 69\% of respondents were employed by companies with revenues over $100 million.

Take Away

Ensuring that employees are adequately compensated for their specific roles and responsibilities is crucial for any company's culture.
Compensation often differs greatly depending on geography and company size.

For more information on compensation information for your company size, give us a call.

Classification of Respondents

The Rundown

In deciphering job families, Nexus found that the majority of respondents fell into three buckets: Operations (52\%), Top Management (18\%), and Estimating (15\%). This is not surprising considering that these three classifications make up the bulk of employment in construction companies.

Take Away

The majority of respondents came from either Estimating, Top Management, or Operations. Not surprising as construction companies have historically maintained low overhead structures.

When discussing job families, it is important to review pay bands for each position. Surprisingly, a recent Performance Management Survey conducted by Nexus concluded that $75 \%$ of companies polled are not utilizing pay bands.

There are many different compensation tools, which one seems to work best for your firm?

Years of Industry Experience

The Rundown

The average construction experience of respondents was 22.6 years. The widespread sample of experience especially helps explain compensation differences among similar job titles.

Take Away

Over half (49.7\%) of the respondents in the 2013 Construction Compensation Survey are going to be retired in the next 20 years. The combined years of experience of all participants equaled 19,301 years.

And yet we found that $63.6 \%$ of construction companies have no Succession Plan in place. Start planning for tomorrow before it is too late. A goal that is not written down is a wish!!

Health Care

97\%  The percent of companies that provide Health Care Plans to employees.

Percentage of respondents who pay for a portion of their Health Care.

The Rundown

Considering the risk associated with construction, it was no surprise that $97 \%$ of companies indicated that they currently provide health care options to their coworkers. What was interesting was that $33 \%$ of the individuals surveyed indicated their employer has informed them their current healthcare plan will be changing do to Obamacare. Most of the changes involve one of the following:

- Higher monthly premiums
- Higher deductibles
- Higher co-pays
- Many indicated that their spouse was being forced off their plan
- Some of the respondents indicated minor increases but no major changes

Take Away

It is interesting that last year 16\% of respondents indicated that they did not contribute for their health care, this year that percentage has dropped and I anticipate as the Affordable Care Act gets fully rolled out to all companies in 2015 we will see a continue decrease in that number.

401K

Percentage of companies that have some sort of match of their 401 K .

Transportation

Types of Transportation Benefits

The Rundown

Although 401K plans have taken a hit from the Great Recession, 92\% of respondents indicated that their company provides 401K plans. Additionally, 88\% of respondents noted that there was some kind of employer match to their 401K plans.

We Believe...

The only factor that separates one Contractor from another is the quality of the people they employ.

The secret competitive advantage that all great companies share is Visionary Leadership combined with tremendous Human Capital.

Companies with Visionary Leadership understand the coming markets, develop unique market strategies, and then invest in the growth of their future leaders.

The single most important driver of organizational performance is LEADERSHIP.
